

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Lots of people contributed to the scribbled sheaf of ideas that became 100 Days, 100 Grand—many without knowing they did so. Special thanks to:

My wife Lynne and the Chang clan, for stories that span cultures; my parents Brian and Carole and sister Stacey, for always being there when I was far away; Melissa and Maina across the Atlantic, creative muses both Homeric and Platonic; singing accountant and longtime friend Neil Goulder, a worked example of “Don’t worry, be happy”; global citizen Tom O’B Baker, for wise words since Tokyo; artist Michelle Abrahall, for colouring inside the lines.

In academia and business: to the past masters of advertising like Hopkins, Ogilvy, Sullivan, and Kennedy, and their books that taught me how to earn like a pro on the life of a poet; consultant Michael Porter, for making business make sense; Dan Kahnemann for working out what makes people tick; Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi and Cal Newport for flow and deep work; Brian Greene for describing how nature might be; Ray Dalio for summarising life’s learnings in two books. And Andrew Matthews for Being Happy. It just works.

In art and lit: James Joyce, for showing how far English could go; Ernest Hemingway, who did the same from the opposite end; Hunter S Thompson, who blitzed both in a blender; the Italian Futurist and Bauhaus Modernist schools, for honing a country boy’s sense of beauty; the creators and characters of 100 Bullets and Watchmen for writing a world more real.

In fitness and in health: Paul “Coach” Wade, Pavel “Kettlebell” Tsatsouline, and brothers Danny and Al Kavadlo for the training programmes that deliver lifelong awesomeness; Fitsz Dubova and the cast and crew of the Commando Temple, the galaxy’s coolest workout space. All you need is a bar and a bell.

Elsewhere: business consultant action hero Gabe Rayner, for showing me where extreme self-actualisation can lead; my alma mater Warwick Business School (wbs.ac.uk) for letting someone who dropped out of school at 16 give its world-ranked MBA a go; my clients down the decades, for trusting briefs and budget to a guy in jeans and T.

Finally, to moral philosopher Ayn Rand (aynrand.org) for defining the only system of values that makes sense.
